

REMARKS

The Examiner in the Official Action has maintained the rejection of the claims for the reasons set forth in paragraph 2. In response to applicant's previously filed response, dated September 17, 2002, the Examiner now states "the Examiner submits that the St. Louis Dispatch Article (1993) is now relied upon for disclosing a limited edition postage stamp." In this regard, applicant has amended the claims to clearly set forth that the present invention is directed to postal stamp. As applicant has clearly pointed and described, a postal stamp is something that is affixed, for example, to an envelope for providing the cost of the official postal for delivering of the mail through the postal service.

Claims 12, 23 and 34 clearly set forth that there is provided an indicia which is not visible under normal viewing conditions for confirming that the limited edition official postal stamp is a valid limited edition postal stamp. The St. Louis Dispatch article is not directed to an official postal stamp but instead directed to a water fowl stamp. These are typically hunting stamp that are used for hunting and not used for official postage. Since this is a Governor's stamp out of the state of Missouri, Department of Conservation, it could not be an official postage as official postage is provided by the U.S. Government and not by the state. Thus, the St. Louis Dispatch article could not and does not teach being directed to an official postal stamp as claimed by applicants. Furthermore, there is nothing that teaches that the indicia on the stamp is not visible under normal viewing conditions. Thus, the primary reference now relied upon by the Examiner could not and does not teach the invention as taught and claimed by applicant.

With regard to the Gasper et al. patent, as previously discussed, this is not directed to an official postal stamp as taught and claimed by applicant. The Gasper et al. reference is directed to providing micro dots which are used to determine whether or not a document may be printed. The Gasper et al. reference is not directed to stamp or a postal stamp in any regard. The statement by applicant was referred to by the Examiner is that the Gasper et al. reference is not directed to a stamp, and therefore could not remotely be directed to a limited edition postal stamp which is even further remote from the Gasper et al. reference. It is respectfully submitted that the Gasper et al. reference is of little relevance to the present invention as it is simply directed to the use of micro dots to prevent printing and is not in any way directed to a stamp as taught and claimed by applicant.

In view of the foregoing applicant respectfully submits that the application is in condition for allowance and such action is respectfully requested.

The summary of the invention has been amended to correspond to the claims presently on file.

Attached hereto is a marked-up version of the changes made to the specification and claims by the current amendment. The attached page(s) is captioned "Version with Markings to Show Changes Made".
